

Deregulated Administrative Fee

Non-regulated products are subject to a Deregulated Administrative Fee (“DAF”). The DAF is determined as a percentage of billing and is used to recover the costs carriers incur to maintain, provision, develop and advance the underlying infrastructure essential to providing internet and data-related products and services. The applicable percentage is subject to change from time to time and applies to products that are not subject to rate preapproval regulation.

Carrier Portal Charge

The Carrier Portal is a proprietary IT management web platform that allows companies to securely and efficiently manage their technology, end-to-end. It is designed and built to help enterprises improve business-process efficiencies and get the most out of their growing IT infrastructures. The Carrier Portal streamlines and centralizes key aspects of the technology lifecycle, and addresses the needs of customers who engage with multiple IT providers. While the Portal manages IT, it also sits atop your existing technology and communicates with each, enhancing and improving what you are already using. Because its functionality is instantly actionable, it puts control where it should be: in your hands. The Carrier Portal Charge rate varies based on features and services selected.
